SEES GREAT DANGER IN PAPER CLAUSES OF THE TREATIES

Notable Address Made in Washington Today Regarding Effect Upon the Manufacturers in This Country.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, May 23.—Only by the adoption of the paper clause of the reciprocity agreement with Canada can cheap paper and the retention of the pulp industry in the United States be secured, according to John Norris, representing the American Paper Manufacturers Association, who appeared before the Senate Finance committee today. Mr. Norris said that from present indications these results cannot be obtained in any other way.

"The Canadian provinces which control the raw material of paper manufacture," Mr. Norris said, "are trying to force American paper mills to move to the other side of the boundary line. They have prohibited the exportation of pulp wood from provincial land; they believe they can starve out the American Paper Mills, whose domestic supplies are nearly exhausted."

Mr. Norris said that the Canadian government of Canada, has not adopted this policy of starvation, but that "the Dominion government is as powerless to stop the provinces from working out their policies of prohibition as the American government is with respect to the Pacific coast states in the matter of Japanese exclusion, or the state of Minnesota in the regulation of its swamp lands."

"In 1901," declared Mr. Norris, "the American paper makers had a chance to consummate an arrangement with Canada, whereby the supply of wood from the provinces of Quebec would be continued indefinitely. But the American senate at the instigation of the Senator Hale and of the extreme 'standstillers' among the paper makers, upset that arrangement and undertook to build up the Canadian provinces so that it could force them by the imposition of retaliatory duties to let their pulp wood into the U. S. without restriction. Instead of composing the situation they provoked an only complication to which the paper clause of the reciprocity treaty offers the only immediate and promising solution."

Mr. Norris said the duty of $2 per ton proposed by the Mann committee which was satisfactory at that time to the Canadians would not now be considered by them. He said that the provincial authorities show grim determination in that the 'province of Quebec recently refused to consider a proposition of free paper in exchange for free wood. They believe they have precluded a situation which has put the American paper maker at their mercy and they propose to bring the paper industry to that province upon terms dictated by them.

American paper makers, said Mr. Norris, own over 12,000 square miles of timber rights on the crown lands of Quebec from which they cannot now ship wood pulp because of the prohibition of May 1, 1910.

Mr. Norris referred to Clifford Pinchot's estimate three years ago of the available supply of wood pulp timber in the United States, which would last as follows: New York State, eight and one-half years; Pennsylvania, nine years; Minnesota, nine years; Vermont, eleven years; New Hampshire, twenty-five years; Maine, twenty-two years and one-half years.

Concluding, Mr. Norris said that nearly forty per cent of the wood and pulp which the United States now uses as the raw material of cheap paper comes from abroad. "The paper industry," he said, "paid $19,000,074 to foreigners in the calendar year 1910 for pulp woods and pulp to keep American pulp mills going. The consumers paid penalties of $150,000 in retaliatory duty because there was an adequate supply of free wood in Canada available for the needs of this market."

WANTS THE SURPLUS SPENT TO ADVANCE UNIVERSAL PEACE

Keir Hardie Would Have English Government Give Twenty Five Millions Toward the Cause.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
London, May 23.—Keir Hardie wants the English government to spend last year's treasury surplus of about $25,000,000 on the promotion of universal peace. Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George's plan is to devote it to a broadening of the old-age pension system, to the improvement of the labor exchanges and to other sociological experiments. Hardie argues that no sociological experiment will do the masses more good than making war impossible.

If England's current year expenditure of $375,000,000 on her army and navy were divided up among the people, Hardie points out it would give an increased wage of $1 weekly to each man, woman and child in Great Britain. For a country where a more or less skilled workman's wages do not exceed $7.50 weekly Hardie thinks this extra $1 would be a pretty substantial increase. He adds that the more this expenditure grows the harder it will be to get social reform.

[BY UNITED PRESS.]
Washington, D. C., May 23.—When the Senate session was begun this afternoon, Senator La Follette resumed his speech on the Lorimer case. That Lorimer would be again placed on the rack was practically the unanimous opinion of Senators.

La Follette continued along the same strain as yesterday and his arraignment of the Illinois Senator was even more bitter than at the opening of his address yesterday.

While it is not expected that the La Follette resolution will be given preference over that presented by Dillingham, still it will be the indirect result of a most thorough probe.

The request of the Illinois legislature that such a probe be held is furnishing ammunition for the insurgents, who have aligned themselves in opposition to Lorimer.

Assembly Has Hard Work in Attempt to Amend the Donald Good Road Measure Now Engrossed.

The measures provide: To prohibit the sale of fireworks containing dynamite or firecrackers more than three inches in length. Making it a felony and providing heavy jail sentences for the willful destruction of property by dynamite or other explosives. Providing upper berth in sleeping cars, when not engaged, must be closed for the convenience of the lower berth occupant; and that the ownership of a government liquor license may be prima facie evidence of guilt on the part of persons accused of selling liquor in dry territories. This exempts drug stores.

The Hunting resolution providing an amendment to the constitution for the recall of public officers came up in the senate today, but because of the absence of some senators was laid over until Thursday. The senate adjourned until Wednesday at nine-thirty o'clock.

The assembly, by a vote of forty-three to forty-one today refused to reconsider the vote which ordered the passage of the Donald good road bill. Opponents of the measure declared that under its present provisions members of the state university faculty would dominate the execution of the law. They asked to have the vote reconsidered and the bill amended to avert this.

The good roads measure will be passed by the assembly, Thursday or Friday, following which the senate concurrence will be given the amendments and it will then go to the governor.

W. C. Shelton, Arrested for Passing Forged Check, Has Preliminary Hearing and Is Held.
W. C. Shelton, arrested at Cheyenne, Wyo., a few weeks ago, and held on a charge of forging a check for seventy-five dollars, and passing it on the Tobacco Exchange bank of Edgerton last fall, had his preliminary hearing before Justice North at the latter city this afternoon and was held for trial, May 31, in the municipal court of this city.
Sheriff Ransom brought the man from Cheyenne last Friday, he being held there by the authorities after an exciting chase about the country, headed by the Pinkerton detective agency of Chicago. Shelton came to Edgerton last fall, on Saturday, Sept. 26, with a carload of cattle from a firm in Miles City, Montana. The check which he passed at the bank he claims was one made out by another party and merely endorsed by him. The bank made every effort to bring him to justice, however, and his consequent arrest and hearing was the result. District Attorney Dunwiddie was at the hearing in behalf of the state and John L. Fisher represented the alleged forger.

BARGAIN BASEMENT

The Big Store is going to feature the Bargain Basement for exactly what it is. It will be a place where "Bargains" are to be had galore. By Bargains is meant, merchandise at a price that is way below its actual worth.

For instance, short ends of fabrics, which are just as good in every way as goods taken from new bolts, except for length. Rather than keep such pieces in stock, they will be put down stairs in the Bargain Basement at a price that will sell them at once.

Lots and lots of merchandise gets soiled in the handling, such as waists, muslin underwear, etc., and while they are not damaged in any other way, yet we cannot sell them at regular prices, and rather than let them accumulate, they will be put in the Bargain Basement at a price that will close them out immediately.

Things get out of style quickly these days, and if a merchant is not constantly watching his stock they accumulate and when invoice time comes they eat a big hole in the profits. The Big Store will offer all such merchandise in its Bargain Basement at prices that will make them BARGAINS.

The Bargain Basement will be a place to save money.
The Bargain Basement will have new surprises every week.
The Bargain Basement will contain only dependable goods.
The Bargain Basement will contain BARGAINS only.
The Bargain Basement will be opened soon.

Let Us Make the Best of It.
It is announced by an English scientist that our winters will gradually get warmer during the next 400 years, but he warns us that after the 2291 there will be a change for the worse. Let us by all means enjoy the sunshine while we may.

Something New.
"I don't know what we'll do with Willie," mourned the visiting mother. "We've tried everything, from whipping to the reward system and coaxing, to get him to do as he should, but he's so stubborn! We really don't know what to try next." "Why don't you try letting him alone?" suggested the small boy saucily snatching morsels of cake.

Trying to Be Accurate.
"So," sobbed the beautiful Ivanlukoff Vassilukovitch, "you say my lover died in battle, with my name on his lips as his last saying?" "Part of it," replied the returned soldier, "part of it."

Love.
Let it come to me—let it come—in all its glory and majesty—beautiful, love! I take you to my heart, dear love; gracious, wonderful, fiery love! Even though you have power to hurt, I long for you, I embrace you. Never before did I open my heart to the mystic rapture of your voice. Speak to me now—speak to me—speak over! The music is stealing away my soul; let it take my body too.—From a Novel by a Woman.

Kerosene a Glass Polish.
All glasses, such as mirrors, shades and the like, will be better polished if kerosene is put into the water, substituting the oil for soap. There should be a tablespoonful of it to a quart of hot water. Washing may done with a cloth, but the final drying will give infinitely better results if paper is used instead.

Youth's Hopefulness.
To the sanguine temperament of youth a game never loses till it is won.

Indian Tribes Amalgamate.
Students of the Indian tell us that while the numbers of the red men are diminishing there is a slow amalgamation of the tribes wherever their geographical location makes this possible. It is supposed that there were 1,000,000 Indians on this continent when the Europeans settled here. In 1885 a government report showed an Indian population of 350,000, and it is estimated that the present population is 50,000 Indians.

His Information at Fault.
It is evident that the man who wrote the inscription for the tablet upon the Oliver Holden house, as that of the "composer of the tunes, 'Coronation,' 'Hymn Forth the Royal Domain,' and 'Gloria in Excelsis deo,'" was not over-familiar with his hymnals. It is as bad as Horace Greeley's account of a dinner, when the feastmaster wrote in the Tribune that the party drank Holdstock and champagne.

Dimensions of Golden Gate.
At the western end the Golden Gate is two miles in width between Point Bonita and Point Lobos. From there it contracts to less than seven-eighths of a mile between Lime point on the northern shore and Fort point on the southern. The depth increases from 23 fathoms (158 feet) to over 60 fathoms (560 feet) near the eastern end.

Chigger Has Multiplied.
Since its introduction from America the chigger has spread far and wide along the west coast of Africa, and is now a greatly dreaded pest.

Information Lacking.
A photograph in Harper's has the legend "Tehuacanas Drinking Mate in the Bay of Their Foldo," without telling us what "Bay" means.—Exchange.

This style is very popular where auto seat is not wanted. End panels of seat are painted in colors to match gear and wheels, making a pretty combination of colors. Backs are extra high, making a comfortable, easy riding surrey.

FORMER JAMESVILLE MAN IN HIGH PLACE

J. G. Wray, who is well known here, Chief Engineer of Largest Telephone Combination in World.

Success reached in the record for eighteen years' work, in the record of J. G. Wray, of Chicago, formerly of this city, who was recently appointed as chief engineer of the combination of Bell telephone, including the companies in the state of Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Indiana. The system of which he is in charge, as engineer, is the largest in the world, being capitalized at fifty million dollars and having over a million subscribers. It is twice as large as the London telephone system and exceeds the telephone system in use in Paris in the number of subscribers. The task at which Mr. Wray has been set is no small one. All construction plans of the combination are under his supervision, directing the work of a corps of engineers, and numerous details that require close attention. That Mr. Wray is well qualified for the position is evinced from the fact that previous to taking his present assignment he was chief engineer of the Chicago Telephone company and handled that position very capably.

J. G. WRAY

Mr. Wray is a son of the late J. G. Wray of this city. He graduated from the Jamesville high school in 1889 and studied electrical engineering at the University of Wisconsin, receiving his diploma after four years of study and work there. In 1892, he entered the service of the Chicago Telephone company. During his college career, Mr. Wray had done newspaper work for the Chicago newspapers and had written special articles for a Madison paper in which Col. Plankington and others were interested. The Madison daily moved to Milwaukee and shortly after he had gone to Chicago, Wray was offered the place as managing editor of the Milwaukee newspaper. He accepted and remained there until the panic of 1893 forced the newspaper out of business. After being forced out of newspaper work, Mr. Wray received another offer from the Chicago Telephone company and reentered his service. The position given him was not the highest, but by patience, persistence and perseverance he worked his way upward until he became chief engineer of the company. He is the inventor of the keyless trunking system now in general use by the Bell Telephone companies.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Father ought to know who runs the house by this time.

"Somehow," it was hard for her to fully realize the situation, and how closely it affected her. The swiftly passing events, the complication arising so suddenly, apparently out of nothing, left her feeling as though she must surely awake from a dream. She could not comprehend what it was all about; the names Bartlett and Phyllis had no clear meaning, they represented nothing but shadows; and this other woman—this music hall singer—what could there be in common between them? Yet there must be something—something of vital importance to her father—something which had, already cost her brother's life. That was the one thing which made it seem an actuality—which brought it home to her as a rugged fact. But for that—and Keith—Keith sitting there before her—who would have doubted it all. And yet even Keith had come into her life so suddenly, so unexpectedly, as to leave her dazed and uncertain, that she extended her hand and touched him, as though to make sure of his actual presence.

"What is it, Hope?"

"Oh, nothing—nothing," her voice breaking in a little sob. "It is so silly, but I was just wondering if you were real—everything seems so impossible. I cannot bring my mind to grasp the situation."

He did not smile, but only took the groping hand into both of his own. "I think I understand, little girl," he said gravely. "You are totally unused to such life. Almost without a moment's warning you have been plunged into a maelstrom of adventure, and are all confused. It is different with me—since the first shot at Sumter my life has been one of action, and adventure has grown to be the stimulus I need, and upon which I thrive. But I assure you, pressing the soft hand warmly, "I am real."

"Of course I know that; it makes me glad to know it. If I could only do something myself, and not just sit here, it would all become real enough to me."

She rose suddenly to her feet, clasping her hands together, her face changing with new animation. "Why couldn't I? I am sure I could. Oh, Mr. Keith, it has just come to me how I can help."

He looked at her questioning, thinking of her beauty rather than of what she said.

"Do—do I really appear so much like—like that woman?" she asked anxiously.

"Very much, indeed, excepting for the slight difference in age."

"That would never be noticed in the dark, or a poor light. Am I the same height?"

"Practically, yes."

"And my voice?—could you distinguish me from her by my voice?"

"I might; yet probably not, unless my suspicions were aroused. What is it you are thinking about?"

She took a deep breath, standing now directly facing him in the light. "Of pleasing Miss Macleire to-night," she said quickly. "Of taking her place, and learning what it is of so much importance Hawley has reported. Don't you think it might be done?"

The sheer audacity of this unexpected proposal left him speechless. He arose to his feet, gripping the back of the chair, almost doubting if he could have heard aright, his eyes searching the girl's face which was glowing with excitement. Of course he could not permit of her exposure to such a risk; the scheme was impracticable, absurd. But was it? Did it not offer a fair chance of success? And was not the possible result worthy the risk assumed? He choked back the earlier words of protest unuttered, puzzled as to what he had best say. A quick-witted resourceful woman might accomplish all she proposed.

"It looks so simple," she broke in impulsively, moving nearer him. "Don't you think I could do it? Would it be unwomanly?"

"The result, if accomplished, would abundantly justify the means, Hope."

He acknowledged it last. "I was not hesitating on that account, but considering the risk you would incur."

"That would be so small—merely the short walk alone with him from the theater to the hotel," she pleaded. "Once here it could make no difference if he did discover my identity, no acknowledgment at all. I was not hesitating on that account, but considering the risk you would incur."

"Don't You Think I Could Do It? Would It Be Unwomanly?"

for there would be plenty of men near at hand to come to my defence. Oh, please say yes."

"If I do, then we must make the situation perfect, and take as few chances of discovery as possible. I must learn exactly how the other dresses, and when she leaves the theater. Fortunately for the success of your plan the Trocadero permits no one but performers to come behind the scenes, so that Hawley will be compelled to wait for the lady outside the stage door. I had better go at once, and see to these details."

"Yes," she said, her eyes sparkling with anticipation, "and I am so glad you are willing. I will be most discreet. You are not sorry I made the proposal?"

"Certainly not. At first it struck me as altogether wrong, but the more I think of it the stronger it appeals to me. It may reveal to us the whole conspiracy, and I cannot believe Hawley would venture upon any gross familiarity likely to cost him the good opinion of his ally. There is too much at stake. Wait here, Hope, and I will be back the very moment I learn all that is necessary."

A glance at the office clock convinced Keith that, in all probability, Miss Macleire had not, as yet, departed for the scene of her evening triumph. Still, it could not be long before she would, and he lit a cigar, sitting down in a corner partially concealed by the clock's desk to wait her appearance. This required longer than anticipated, and fearing lest he might have missed the departure entirely, he was about to question the busy Thomas, when he beheld Hawley enter hurriedly from the street and run up the stairs. He, then, had been the lookout. All the better, as he would now have no opportunity to unfold his tale to the lady, as it would be necessary for them to hurry to the theater. Whatever the nature of the revelation it would have to wait until the walk home. The excitement of the adventure was already creeping into Keith's blood, his pulse quickening.

The two returned almost immediately, conclusively proving that Miss Macleire, fully dressed for the street, had been awaiting the arrival of her gallant with some impatience. Hawley was busily explaining his delay as they came down the stairs, and paid little attention to the seemingly dozing officer. Indeed, Miss Christie monopolized all his thoughts. With quick scrutiny the watcher noted the more conspicuous articles of apparel constituting her costume—the white mantle thrown over her head, the nearly fitting blue dress, the light cape covering the shoulders—surely it would not be difficult to duplicate these, as so to pass muster under the dim light of the streets. Far enough in their rear to feel safe from observation he followed, noting with increased pleasure the rapidity with which they covered the required distance. Clearly Miss Christie was already nervous lest she have not sufficient time remaining in which to properly dress for her act, and there would be no exchange of confidences on the outward journey. Hawley left her, as Keith anticipated, at the stage entrance, the lady hastening within. Her escort strolled leisurely back to the front of the house, and finally, purchasing a ticket, entered, the performance already having begun.

Keith knew perfectly the arrangement of the theater—the seats in front; tables all through the center; a gallery filled with benches; a noisy orchestra beneath the stage; a crowded audience of men, with only here and there a scattered representative of the gentler sex; busy waiters dodging in and out among the tables, and down the aisles, filling orders for liquors from the nearby saloon. The air would be pungent with the odor of drink, thick with the fumes of tobacco, and noisy with voices, except as some special favorite on the stage won temporary attention. The Trocadero possessed but one redeeming feature—an doorway connected stage and auditorium, and the management brooked no interference with his artists. It had required some nerve to originally enforce this rule, together with a smart fight or two, but at this period it was acknowledged and respected. No sooner had Hawley vanished than Keith found occasion to enter into casual conversation with the door-keeper, asking a number of questions, and having impressed upon the mind of that astute individual the idea that he was dealing with a "gent" enamored of one of the stage beauties. A coin slipped quietly into the man's hand served to deepen this impression, and unlocked discreet lips otherwise sworn to secrecy. Out of much general information a little of real value was thus extracted—Miss Macleire's act began at 9:45 and was over promptly at 10:10. It required about twenty minutes more for her to change again into street clothes, and she usually left the theater immediately after, which would be about 10:30. Yes, there was a vestibule outside the stage door, and on bad nights, those waiting for the ladies could slip in there. But on such a night as this they generally hung around outside. No, there was no watchman, but the manager was frequently prowling around. Had he any, however, at 10:30, getting the stage ready for the "Flying Horseman." Abundantly satisfied and realizing the door-keeper's professional suggestion that he'd better buy a ticket and take a look at the show, Keith slipped away, and hastened back to the hotel. The more he investigated the more feasible appeared the girl's plan, and he was now fully committed to it.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Stage Door of the Trocadero. Hope discovered very little difficulty in duplicating the outer garments Keith reported Miss Macleire as wearing. The colors, indeed, were not exactly the same, yet this difference was not sufficient to be noticeable at night by the eyes of a man who had no reason to suspect deceit. The girl was in a flutter of nervous excitement as she hastened about the room, donning her few requirements of masquerade. Yet Keith noted with appreciation that she became perceptibly cooler as the moment of departure approached. With cheeks aflame and eyes sparkling, yet speaking with a voice revealing no falter, she pressed his arm and declared herself prepared for the ordeal. The face under the shadow of the mantle was so arch and piquant, Keith could not disguise his admiration.

"Am I Christie Macleire?" she asked laughingly.

"Sufficiently so to fool our friend," he returned, "but I am ready to swear that lady never looked so charming." "A compliment, and spoken as though you really meant it."

"Have I not been honest enough with you in the past to be credited with honesty now?" he protested, a little hurt by the bantering tone.

"Of course you have; I merely talk lightly to keep my courage up. You can have no idea how afraid I am."

"Then you are truly an actress, for you appear the picture of enjoyment. But we must go, or Hawley will be there before us, and thus spoil all our plans."

They passed out through the office together, seeing no one familiar to either, Hope keeping her face partially concealed. The east side of the street was less frequented than the other, having fewer saloons along its way, and they chose its darkness. As they advanced, the long habit of frontier life caused Keith to glance behind before they had progressed a block, and he was thus made aware that they were being followed. Convinced that they were being followed, Keith turned slightly, and without a word to alarm the girl, he managed to observe every movement of the dimly outlined figure which advanced with them, timing every motion to theirs. Long before they crossed the street to the Trocadero he was convinced there was no mistake—the fellow, whoever he might be, was trailing them. Keith smiled grimly to himself, resolving that as soon as he had left the lady he would teach the spy a lesson not soon to be forgotten.

They barely entered the outer circle of the Trocadero lights, noting a group of men thronging about the doors, and hearing the sound of the hand within, and then turned swiftly down the narrow dark alleyway leading toward the stage entrance. Keith, having been there before, advanced confidently, but Hope, her heart beating wildly, clung to his arm, scarcely venturing a word in reply to his whispered assurances. Fortunately they encountered no one, and Keith, feeling cautiously in the dark, easily succeeded in locating the opening to the vestibule. Listening intently he became convinced that no one occupied the little shed. He had intended to remain with the girl until the time came for her to emerge, but the remembrance of that figure docking them all the way from the hotel now caused a change of plan. He held her hand closely clasped in his.

"Now, Hope, I am going to leave you," he whispered, "and your own wit will have to carry you through. I know you will play your part all right, and it will be mine to wait for Christie, and give her some explanation of why Hawley failed to meet her as he promised. It will never do for her to suspect, until you have time to learn all possible. You are not afraid?"

"Yes, I am," clinging to him, "but I am going through it just the same."

Red the Popular Color.

Red is the color loved by the Bulgarians and few dresses there are not enriched with its brightness. Their dyes are all their own and the red runs to a dark dullness almost infringing on crimson that is a secret carefully guarded and cannot be replaced outside the mountain fastnesses of the little state itself.

Getting Even.

The front door bell rang. A girl with blonde curls responded. There stood a battered man, telling her that the maid who polished the front bell had left a stain on the door post.

All this could be remedied, he said, exhibiting a little tin plate which would fit neatly around the metal and protect the stone.

"But we've tried the tin plate," said the blonde girl. "You left one here before—the maid says she's tried it and it's useless."

"Useless—when it will keep the stone clean? Do you want a soiled front door post? Do you want people passing to look up and say: 'The people who live there must have a dirty house—for look at their front door post?'"

Then he waited for the blonde girl to say: "Yes, we'll take it."

But she said: "No, we don't want it."

The man started down the steps. Then he stopped and made a survey of the premises, his eyes resting finally on the girl.

"Perhaps the house is dirty inside," he said contemptuously, and walked away.

Great Joke.

"Will you kindly move a little and give that third looking woman a seat?"

"That's a joke on you; she's my wife."

Queer Tastes of Children.

Young children often acquire abnormal tastes and one of the most common of these is paper eating. Hair eating is confined to girls, and a number of instances are on record in which death resulted from the formation of a great ball of hair in the stomach. Balls of thread, flock, tow or matted fiber were sometimes found in the stomach of those who worked with these materials.

Fate of Man With New Idea.

A man states a new idea. Few agree with him. He is regarded as a theorist, an innovator, a crank. No one will listen to him. The years pass and the idea is universally accepted. Then no one will listen to him because everybody agrees with him. He is a bore.
